Generally, the students in university assignments follow the MLA format. The name and the title of the assignment are written on the first page of the assignment and that page is regarded as the cover page. However, in some cases, the teacher asks the student to make a separate cover page and then use it to represent the assignment by adding it ... For example, while creating an academic cover page, you are needed to choose a format to draft your cover page in. If you are going to write a business cover page, you should not be worried about any format. Before you start making a cover page, you should try to know which format is followed in the institute you are writing your research paper. ... Cover pages include the metadata of the assignments, for example - the students name and the course number, etc. It also includes different data as per the need of the course. All these data help in handling the assignments efficiently. Few universities require or provide cover sheets in a standardised format. Assignment cover pages are very useful and can be created in MS Word or Adobe. MS Word software allows pictures and text to be used on the cover page. Students may also use headers and footers, page borders and other features in MS Word to create a nice cover page. You can even use the popular heading styles given in MS Word.
